“ Marc I don't know what to say but that I have a hole in my heart now. When I call the house I still expect you to pick up and say "hey Kay" and I know that will never happen again. You were my only full brother and closest to age to me and I'm sorry you were in pain and I wish I could of took it all away. Death is just part of life and this was your choice, I just hope there was grandma Doris on the other side waiting for you !

“ Marc, you were my first true love and forever and always in my heart, mind and prayers... so many memories of us, of you. Some i selfishly want to keep between us but there's the time i fell asleep on the peter pan on one of our weekly visits to see each other and i would've gone who knows where if you werent there tapping on the glass to wake me up :-) and you made a comment about my face being all red from sleeping on my hand. There's the countless times of you, me and my sis erin hanginh out in my bedroom (i still have the polaroids), and us walking with her friend ben down the city streets of springfield, "chimneys!" Haha. I remember you being man enough NOT to fight in gront of me, even though those three guys jumped you. I cherish those times sittin at your kitchen table with your mom and stepdad. Sitting with you in the living room to watch Scooby Doo. Exchanging baby pictures, which i still have yours right next to mine as you open up one of my photo albums. I also still have all those cool things you made me in woodshop, i love those, Marc. Most of all i remember you always treating me with kindness and respect, even though i didn't quite know what that was back then. I remember your smile, your laugh, and how no matter what you were ALWAYS there for me. You portrayed a hardened person but lord knows you are selfless and have a bigger heart then most. I love you Marc, i miss you, and im so so sorry. Ive struggled alot the last couple of years and wasnt in a position to be a good friend to anyone, but i never forgot about you, i never stopped caring, i hope that if you didnt know that before you do now...
